Todd McFarlane, Todd McFarlane Productions, Inc., TMP International Inc., McFarlane Worldwide, Inc. and Image Comics, Inc.* (the "District Court Litigation"), including the accounting procedure for determination of amounts owed to Gaiman by the Defendants (the "Accounting") pursuant to the terms and provisions of a stipulation and judgment of the District Court ("Wisconsin Stipulation and Judgment"):¹

6 2. Within ten (10) days after the lists and copies are exchanged pursuant to paragraph
7 1 above, Gaiman and the Defendants will exchange lists of documents and information ("Data
8 Exchange") that each believes the other should submit to the other and to the Accountant for 9 consideration in resolving the Accounting. The Data Exchange shall include any products,

11 documents and information previously addressed to provide current and complete data, including
12 information with respect to persons and entities affiliated with the Defendants that are parties to a 13 license agreement with either or both Defendants.

14 3. Within thirty (30) days after the above lists are exchanged, the Data Exchange will 15 be compiled by the respective parties and delivered to each other by Gaiman and the Defendants.
16 The Data Exchange will include Documents and information with respect to use, licensing, 17 income, expenses and profits through (a) the date of the Debtor's bankruptcy petition filing, and 18 (b) the last day of the quarter ended June 30, 2005. Similar additional Documents and

1 4. If there is any dispute between the parties as to whether particular Documents
2 and/or information should be included in the Data Exchange, the parties will notify each other

4 dispute. For the 10 days subsequent to the receipt of such notice by one or both of the parties,
5 Gaiman and Defendants will endeavor to consult with each other directly or through their 6 respective bankruptcy counsel of record, preferably via telephonic conference, and shall use their
7 reasonable best efforts under the circumstances to coordinate and proceed with the Data Exchange
8 as to all Documents and/or information not subject to a dispute, while continuing to seek to 9 resolve the dispute(s) by agreement.

10 5. If any dispute as to whether any additional Documents and/or information should 11 be included in the Data Exchange and delivered to the requesting party is not resolved informally
12 within such 10 days, then, within the following 14 days, the parties will submit each such 13 unresolved dispute to the Accountant for resolution, along with respective positions, and will

16 Accountant determines should be included in the Data Exchange will be delivered to the other 17 party within 30 days after the Accountant informs the parties of his decision.

18 6. Within 30 days after the Data Exchange has been completed, the Defendants will

3 7. After Gaiman delivers his response to Defendants' proposal, for thirty (30) days the 4 parties will endeavor to consult with each other directly and/or through their respective 5 bankruptcy counsel of record, preferably face to face or via telephonic conference, and use their
6 reasonable best efforts under the circumstances to settle the Accounting ("Settlement Period").

7 8. If the Settlement Period (and any extension thereof to which Gaiman and 8 Defendants agree) expires and the parties have not reached a settlement agreement, within 7 days
9 after the expiration of the Settlement Period the automatic stay of Bankruptcy Code section 362(a)
10 shall be deemed modified to permit the Accounting to resume according to the terms and 11 provisions of the Wisconsin Stipulation, Memorandum and Order, and Judgment, and permit the 12 District Court Litigation to be concluded; further, within such 7 day period the parties shall 13 deliver copies of the Data Exchange information and all written communications exchanged by 14 the parties pursuant to this Stipulation to the Accountant.

15 9. If the parties do not reach a full and complete settlement agreement, they shall 16 nonetheless attempt to reach an agreement during said 7 day period on procedures for the 17 Accountant to follow. To the extent the parties are unable to reach an agreement on such 18 procedures, within 10 days after the 7 day period for transmitting to the Accountant copies of the 19 foregoing information expires, the parties will each provide the Accountant with their positions on 20 the procedures the Accountant should use. Pursuant to the terms and provisions of the Wisconsin
21 Stipulation and Judgment the Accountant shall deliver to Gaiman and Defendants a written 22 description of the procedures the Accountant will apply to complete the Accounting. Gaiman and 23 the Defendants will jointly request that the Accountant expedite the delivery of such information.

24 10. Thereafter, the Accountant and the parties will resume the Accounting, taking into 25 account the work and progress and any partial agreements made by the parties pursuant to the

1 terms of this Stipulation, in accordance with the terms and provisions of Wisconsin Stipulation
2 and Judgment, and the District Court Litigation will otherwise proceed.

3 11. If, on the other hand, the parties reach a full and complete settlement agreement, it
4 will be jointly presented to the District Court and the District Court will be asked to enter
5 judgment in accordance with the Wisconsin Stipulation and Judgment to resolve the District Court
6 Litigation.

7 12. Except to the extent otherwise provided in a settlement agreement, the automatic
8 stay in the above-captioned case will continue to apply with respect to collection or enforcement
9 of a judgment in the District Court Litigation from the Debtor or the bankruptcy estate.

10 13. Until either (a) the Accountant delivers its Final Accounting to the District Court in 11 accordance with paragraph 10 above, or (b) the parties deliver a settlement agreement to the 12 District Court in accordance with paragraph 11 above, collection against McFarlane of any
13 judgment or any moneys claimed to be due by McFarlane pursuant to the District Court litigation
14 will be stayed, provided that McFarlane and the Debtor reasonably comply with this stipulation in 15 good faith. If Gaiman persuades the Bankruptcy Court that McFarlane or the Debtor are not 16 reasonably complying with this stipulation in good faith, the stay protection of this paragraph 13
17 to McFarlane shall cease.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER
02-C-48-8

Plaintiff Neil Gaiman commenced this copyright action alleging, among other things, that he was joint owner of certain comic book issues and characters with defendants Todd McFarlane and Todd McFarlane Productions, Inc. and was entitled to an accounting for profits on the copyrighted works. Prior to trial all named parties except Image Comics, Inc. stipulated to an accounting procedure for profits in the event plaintiffs prevailed at trial on that claim. Plaintiffs did so prevail at trial and the parties were ordered to proceed pursuant to the stipulation. The matter is presently before the Court on cross motions to clarify the accounting procedure and to compel the accounting. The matter is also before the Court on plaintiffs' motion to sanction defendants for failing to proceed with the accounting.

MEMORANDUM

The stipulation for an accounting contemplates the filing of motions "regarding any legal and factual issues the Parties believe must be resolved prior to the Accountant performing the accounting." Three such issues have been raised: (1) the relevant time period over which to conduct the accounting; (2) who must participate in the accounting process; (3) the percentage of profits to which plaintiffs are entitled from the various characters and publications.

Relevant Time Period

The accounting is to be conducted from the time of creation of the works. Defendants argue that the accounting should only occur for the three years preceding the action because recovery of profits realized earlier would be barred by the statute of limitations or by the equitable doctrines of laches and estoppel. There is no basis for any of these defenses.

Defendants' statute of limitations argument revisits the defense which failed on summary judgment and at trial. Unlike an action for infringement, an action for an accounting from a co-owner accrues under 17 U.S.C. § 507(b) not when the copyrighted material is wrongfully sold or used, but rather "when plain and express repudiation of co-ownership is communicated to the claimant." Zuill v. Shanahan, 80 F.3d 1366, 1369 (9th Cir. 1996). Accordingly, Zuill was barred from recovering any profits from the defendant, even though they were realized in the three years preceding the action, because the cause of action - repudiation of plaintiff's interest - occurred outside three years. Conversely, the jury found that a reasonable person in plaintiffs' position would not have discovered that defendants were claiming sole ownership three years before this action commenced. Accordingly, plaintiffs' action is not barred and they are entitled to a full accounting as co-owners.

This result is consistent with the conclusion in Taylor v. Merrick, 712 F.2d 1112, 1119 (7th Cir. 1983), that the statute of limitations is not a bar for periods during which the plaintiff did not discover infringement. The evidence presented at trial suggested that defendants affirmatively reassured plaintiff Gaiman that he had not given up any of his rights to the works to which he contributed. Furthermore, he was periodically provided with payments because of those rights, although he was not provided with information to calculate whether the payments were an accurate accounting of his share. These actions are consistent with his ongoing copyright ownership and would not trigger the statute of limitations. There is no statute of limitations bar, nor any equitable basis in laches or estoppel which prevents plaintiffs from pursuing an accurate accounting and recovery of profits once defendants affirmatively denied, contrary to prior statements and conduct, that plaintiffs had rights in the publications and characters.

There is no inequity in permitting an accounting for periods during which some money was paid to plaintiffs so long as any payments are offset against amounts due.

Participation

Only the copyright owners, Todd McFarlane and Todd McFarlane Productions, Inc. are liable to account to plaintiffs. There is no dispute that only joint owners must account for profits to their co-owners, 1 NIMMER ON COPYRIGHT § 6.12[B], and that defendants TMP International, Inc., McFarlane Worldwide, Inc. and Image Comics, Inc. are mere licensees and have never been owners of a copyright in the works at issue. Furthermore, there has been no evidence offered which would suggest that the distinct corporate entities of these defendants may be disregarded for purposes of the accounting nor did plaintiffs pursue such a legal theory of liability at trial. Accordingly, plaintiffs are entitled to recover only their share of profits realized by Todd McFarlane and Todd McFarlane Productions, Inc. from the use and sale of the works, including direct profits from sales of the works and license

fees, royalties or other payments or benefits from third parties to Todd McFarlane and Todd McFarlane Productions, Inc. in exchange for use of the works. Plaintiffs are not entitled to recover profits realized by TMP International, Inc., McFarlane Worldwide, Inc. or Image Comics from their use of the licensed works.

Where the parties to a license agreement are related, such as in contracts between the McFarlane defendants, the accountant may deem it necessary to examine financial records of both the licensor and the licensees to reach a determination on the actual amount of benefits which accrued to the trademark owner/licensor in exchange for the license to use the works. In view of the fact that all McFarlane defendants stipulated to the accounting it is appropriate to require their participation in the provision of financial information if requested by the accountant.

There is no basis for any accounting against or participation by defendant Image Comics which is an unrelated licensee who entered no stipulation concerning the accounting.

Products and Percentage of Profit

The undisputed general rule is that joint copyright owners must account to each other for half of all profits realized from the work regardless of the relative contributions of the co-authors. NIMMER, 36-08; Erickson v. Trinity Theater, Inc., 13 F.3d 1051. Based on this undisputed rule the parties apparently agree that plaintiffs are entitled to one half of profits realized on the sale of Spawn issues 9 and 26 and Angela issues 1, 2 and 3.

Aug 02 2005 10:05PM KEN F LEVIN

The parties disagree on the appropriate percentage of profits to be provided in accounting for use of the characters Medieval Spawn, Cogliostro and Angela which the jury also found to be works of joint authorship. The characters were licensed for the production of toy figures and other purposes and may also have been used directly by defendants Todd McFarlane and Todd McFarlane Productions, Inc. The Court finds no support for the defendants position that the profits from the use and licensing of the characters should be divided other than equally. Accordingly, plaintiffs can recover half of those profits and licensing fees.

Motion for Contempt

Plaintiffs' motion for contempt and recovery of fees is without merit. The plain terms of the stipulation provide that the accounting would await resolution of the issues here addressed. However, the stipulation also clearly contemplates that the accounting will not await the outcome of motions after verdict or an appeal. In that regard it is clear that the accounting is treated as would be the damage phase of a trial. Accordingly, plaintiffs' motion for contempt and sanctions is denied and the parties may proceed to conduct the accounting in accordance with the terms of the stipulation and the Courts rulings on issues of fact and law relating to the accounting.

ORDER

IT IS ORDERED that the accounting may proceed in accordance with the stipulation and the rulings herein.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that plaintiffs' motion for contempt is DENIED.

earned by the appropriate McFarlane Defendants from the relevant publications or characters. Within 14 days of being served with the lists, the previously-designated damages experts for Plaintiffs and the McFarlane Defendants shall make a good faith effort to jointly select one accountant or accounting firm from the six submitted by the Parties to perform the accounting of profits. The Parties shall in good faith attempt to reach agreement regarding each party's objections and proposed changes. However, should the Parties be unable to reach agreement on any of the Accountant's procedures, the Accountant shall have the final decision regarding those procedures on which the Parties disagree.

Within 14 days of receiving the Accountant's accounting of profits, each party may submit a list of objections to that accounting. In the absence of any objections by the Parties, the accounting shall be final (the "Final Accounting"). If any of the Parties submit objections to the Accounting, within 7 days of receiving those objections, the Accountant shall inform the Parties of whether the Accountant will revise its accounting in light of any of those objections. Should the Accountant revise its accounting in light of the Parties' objections, that revised accounting shall be the Final Accounting.

Within 10 days of being served with the proposed judgment, brief and supporting materials, the McFarlane Defendants may serve and file a brief in response and supporting materials. Within 5 days of being served with the McFarlane Defendants' response, Plaintiffs may file a brief in reply and supporting materials. The Court may then enter judgment as it deems appropriate.
